Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

At the monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, letters were read from various persons, including one from Hon. E. D. Margan, acknowledging the receipt of the resolutions adopted at the last meeting asking the government for the return of duties recently paid by various merchants, on the ground of the insufficient promulgation of the act imposing fifty per cent. additional duties on imports, and stating that the paper had been handed to the Senate Finance Committee.

A communication from the Montreal Board of Trade, asking for an opinion on the subject of the Reciprocity treaty, its operations, and the advisability of its continuance.

Mr. Bloodgood spoke in favor of the continuance of the treaty, and was made chairman of the committee to whom the subject was referred.

Mr. A. A. Low was named to act on a committee from the municipality and other bodies, to make proper arrangements for the reception of the remains of distinguished United States officers that may arrive in the city.

The following resolutions favoring New London as the location for the proposed new navy-yard were offered by Captain C. H. Marshall, and adopted:

Whereas, The Secretary of the Navy called the attention of Congress to the necessity of an additional Navy-yard and depot adapted to the enlarged wants of the country; and,

Whereas, The location of said yard and depot is of vast importance to our city as a means of defense against foreign aggression; and

Whereas, A board of six naval officers and engineers were appointed under an act of Congress to survey and examine League Island, and in the Delaware Bay, and the harbor of New London, Connecticut, with reference to their capacity and fitness for that object, and to report by the selection of which place the public interests would be best promoted; and

Whereas, A majority of the said board, after devoting more than two months to a careful, laborious and thorough survey and examination of said sites, and after a full discussion of these advantages, immediate and incidental, came to the conclusion that the harbor of New London possessed the necessary capacity and fitness for such yard, and that the public interests would be promoted by its establishment there, instead of League island;

And whereas, During the present session of Congress, the Naval Committee, together with a delegation from the Military Committee, and the Committee of Ways and Means, have visited and personally examined the said sites, and a majority has recently reported in favor of the harbor of New London; therefore,

Resolved, That in view of the importance of this question to the whole country, and especially to the interests of commerce and navigation, which are especially protected by the navy, and in which this city is so deeply interested, this chamber fully concurs in the expression of opinion of the said board of naval officers and engineers, and of said naval committee, and do earnestly urge upon Congress to speedily pass a law establishing the navy yard and depot at New London, and to appropriate the necessary means for carrying the same into effect.

Resolved, That the preamble and resolutions be duly authenticated and transmitted to both Houses of Congress by the hands of a committee, consisting of Messrs. Marshall and McCurdy.

The Ages of Enrolled Men.

To the Editor of the World:

As Congress is about discussing an amendment to the Conscription Act, would it not be well for them at the same time to extend the enrollment to the age of sixty years, and if there is to be another draft, to draft between the ages of twenty and sixty (20 and 60) years. Are there any conclusive reasons for restricting the enrollment and draft to the ages of from twenty to forty-five? Are there not good and conclusive reasons to authorize (if there is to be another draft) the extension of the draft to the age of sixty years? Are not men who have passed forty-five and who are not sixty years old, as a general rule, more fit for military service than youths of twenty and upward. Men who have passed forty-five are, as a general rule, more firm in bone and muscle, more steady in action, more experienced in the world; and as an examination is made of drafted men, those who are not physically able between the ages of forty-five and sixty can be exempted as well as those younger who are physically disable. Should not physical ability, not age, be the test and limit of enrollment and draft into the military service? When we concede the value of population to a country, are not the youth of more value on that account than those who have already reared families, and are not likely any longer to be incumbered with infant offspring? The youth, so to speak, are the "seed corn" of the country, and who are to marry the maidens when the youth are cut off? It is to the youth that we look for our growth in population. The youth who is killed in battle is cut off before the allotted age of man; he leaves no offspring to perpetuate his name, or if he leaves a child to mourn his loss, it is most likely a helpless infant, who, without a father to protect it, must struggle alone through life's contest. The injury to a youth who by reason of wounds is compelled to go limping through life is greater than to an older man, who has not many more years to travel through life's pilgrimage. The injury also to the morals of youth resulting from military service is greater than that likely to result to older men whose moral habits are already formed. Have not the elder men participated in moulding our country's destiny and enjoyed her blessings and protection longer than the youth? And should they not on this account share the burdens of the state? The young are acknowledged to be brave and patriotic; they do not ask that the burden should be placed upon the older men alone, but they do ask that the older should share it with them, and that those men between the ages of forty-five and sixty years should be enrolled and placed upon an equal footing with them, and should share with them the heat and burden of the day. They more readily request and advocate this change, because they have observed that many of those who are not enrolled, and are not liable to be exposed to the peril of battle, are the most zealous advocates of war. That they, like Æsop's trumpeter, are constantly blowing the trumpet for battle, and urge others to the fray, while they themselves are careful not to set a foot upon the field, or to shed the first drop of their blood for the cause they advocate valiantly with words.

CAPITAL TROTTING ON THE UNION COURSE, LONG ISLAND.

On Wednesday afternoon one of the fiercest and best contested matches of the present season came off over the Union track. The company present was larger than has been seen on any of the Long Island courses this season, including a fair proportion of ladies in carriages. The match was for a purse and stake of one thousand three hundred dollars, mile heats, 3 in 5, in harness. Only three started, although five were originally entered. The three competetors represented three northern cities: the winner, Lady Emma, of New-York; the second-best, May Queen, of Philadelphia; and the third-best, Dan Mace, of Boston.

First Heat.—After six different attempts at scoring, the word was at length given. May Queen had the pole and Lady Emma the outside. Dan Mace broke immediately and May Queen led around the turn, Hiram being second, with Lady Emma. Going to the quarter-pole, which was passed in 37 seconds, Lady Emma and May Queen were head and head. Passing this point, the Lady drew away and at the half-mile was two lengths in front, in 1 minute 13¼ seconds. Dan and May Queen being close together. They kept in those positions to the turn into the homestretch, where Dan broke up, and Lady Emma drew away from the Philadelphia mare, and won the heat easily by three lengths; May Queen, whose driver pulled her when he saw her chance of the heat was gone, beating Dan Mace by the same distance; time 2 minutes 37¼ seconds.

Second Heat.—The pool sales showed the relative estimation of the horses. Lady Emma (in pools of $100), $80; Dan Mace and Emma, $20 each. Offers to bet $500 to $400 on Dan Mace against May Queen. They got off at the first attempt, May Queen being a length behind when the word was given, the other two well together. Lady Emma led around the turn, with Dan Mace as her immediate follower, and thus they remained on passing the quarter-pole, in 36¼ seconds. Dan broke on the back stretch, and May Queen closed up the gap, the former breaking and running again on passing the half-mile, which Emma passed in 1 minute 12¼ seconds. The latter, trotting magnificently throughout without a single skip or break, maintained her leading position, and won the heat easily by two lengths in 2 minutes 27¼ seconds; May Queen breaking half-way from up the distance stand, and and thus allowing Dan Mace to gain second place in the heat.

Third Heat.—Dan Mace broke, when the word "go" was given, at the fourth essay, and Hiram sent Lady Emma along to the quarter-pole in 36¼ seconds, May Queen being second, three lengths behind the leader. Hiram widened the gap to six length at the half-mile, and a full dozen on the third quarter; the contest between May Queen and Dan, on whose positions in the race heavy amounts depended, being regarded with great interest. The Philadelphia mare, finely driven, kept ahead, although Dan broke and run repeatedly in his efforts to get ahead. Lady Emma kept her lead up the homestretch and finally won easily by four lengths in 2 minutes 29¾ seconds. Coming up the straight, Dan Mace out-trotted May Queen; who kept as steady as clockwork in her gait, and bet her by half a length over the score. The judges, however, after mutual deliberation, decided that May Queen was entitled to second honors, on account of Dan Mace's repeated running in the heat. The winner never made a break in any of the three heats.
